ELBLAG CANAL

The Elblag Canal was considered as one of the seven wonders of Poland.

This world class example of water technology links the western Mazurian lakes with the Vistula Lagoon and is today a popular tourist route. It was designed by the engineer Jakob Georg Steenke at the beginning of the 19th century thus establishing a trade route between East Prussia and the Baltic Sea.

The entire length of the Elblag Canal is 115.6km. The originality of this waterway is the way that it overcomes the difference in levels totalling nearly 100m – with the help of locks and inclines. The latter have an arrangement of rails with water driven pulling mechanisms.
